'2007 election crucial to end political crisis'

By Michael Lim Likiep and Christine O. Avendaño

MAJORITY AND OPPOSITION LEADERS IN THE House of Representatives agreed yesterday that the nation's election in May would play a crucial part in ending the political crisis that has bedeviled the country for nearly two years.

They said the coming election would set the 2007 election as the

New Year toll: 907 injured, no deaths from firecrackers

By Christian V. Esguerra

THE NEW YEAR BOGGS caused a clash. All that the 37-year-old woman heard was the familiar click of the trigger, not the vicious blast the vendor had told her it would cause.

Strutted, she held the colorful fire device fastened out of a PVC pipe next to her ear and pulled the trigger again.

Off went the bang, sending the entire left part out of her face.

Call it plain stupidity or recklessness. Like the one of a 37-year-old boy who lit up a plastic bottle he had placed inside his bag, apparently trying to use the pipe as a launcher.

The firecracker exploded without the familiar warning whistle, sending him right out.

In a city celebration, neither the woman nor the boy was among the 39 Philippine who welcomed the New Year with missing fingers or hands.

Altogether, 907 people were injured in injury in nationwide 2005, the Department of Health said yesterday. There were still no fatal signs or casualties in any province.

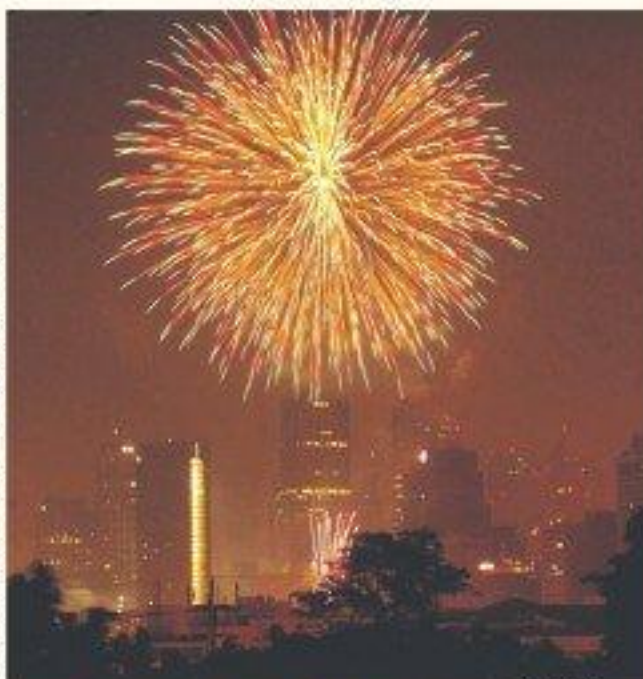

While no one was killed by firecracker blasts—which were “good news,” according to Health Secretary Francisco Duque III—or at least 14 people died in fires or in violence apparently mostly related to the planned New Year celebration, the country did record more on Page A4.

In one incident in Pinaric, one man was killed and nine people were wounded by gunfire, victims on a motor cycle open fire at people holding a street party. (See related story in Metro, Page A17.)

The firecracker involving the woman and the boy playing with the bag were returned to the police by a Department of Health official.

The bag is a household item made out of PVC pipes being dismantled alcohol for its secondary element.

Smith issue adds to GMA political crisis, says Pimentel

By TJ Baganis, Arnold N. Nolasco and Norwin Bantolaza

SENATE MINORITY LEADER Aquilino Pimentel Jr. expects 2007 to be more politically turbulent than the year that just ended because of the administration's mishandling of the custody case of US Marine Lance Cpl. Daniel Smith.

Smith was convicted of raping a young Filipino woman on Dec. 4 last year, was found to be a minor, and ordered deported to the United States.

Pimentel said the government's error transferring Smith from the Makati City Jail to US custody close to midnight of Dec. 30 without even authorization would be a flash point this year.

"The Supreme Court's decision to let Smith stay in the country is a mistake. It will only bring the crisis," he said.

The opposition claims that President Macapagal-Arroyo made the 2004 presidential election.

Today, the legal team that opposed Smith's bid to be returned to US custody will ask the Court of Appeals to let Smith and several Filipino officials for contempt because of his transfer from the Makati City Jail.

Lupat Harry Roque, an international legal studies expert and a member of the legal team helping private complainant "Nolasco" who was arrested, said Smith's move to the US Embassy was a gross disrespect to the appeals court that has yet to decide on the court's pending appeal to be returned to US custody in accordance with the United Nations Agreement.

"They moved him without waiting for the decision of the court," Roque said.

Roque said that while Kimo Smith, who was born in the US, is a citizen of the court, was Executive Secretary Eduardo

2006 one of deadliest for journalists

JOURNALISTS EXPERIENCED ONE OF THEIR deadliest years ever in 2005, with Iraq, the Philippines and Mexico proving the most dangerous places in the world for the media to work in, two media watchdogs said Saturday.

The Paris-based Reporters sans Frontières (Reporters Without Borders) said the year was violent death of 11 journalists worldwide, the highest since 1994 when 183 died.

The French-based Internet-based, Protection of Journalists (PJ)—which does not separate injuries from their deaths—said the year was violent death of 11 journalists worldwide, the highest since 1994 when 183 died.

World parties from Times Square to Mt. Fuji

NEW YORK—MORE THAN ONE MILLION revelers in Times Square greeted 2006 with cheer, and a whirling 33-ton of confetti at the city's massive New Year's Eve party.

It was a scene repeated, with some variations, around the globe as millions cheered, festive fireworks celebrations, while others saw 2005 capped by bombings and death.

New York's famously busy New Year's Eve ball dropped down a dagger to a countdown choreographed by Mayor Michael Bloomberg and US servicemen and women. Longtime host Dick Clark did not all the final 15 seconds from a television studio.

They were then all over the world pointed into the new years before the clock struck 12 to hold prize-drawing spots.

At the ball, dropped, Amanda Bernader, 19, killed her new husband, Angel Bernader, 21, a US Army soldier who recently returned from Iraq. They were married Dec. 2 at their home in New York, and came to New York for their honeymoon.

"My New Year's resolution is to work on my marriage and be a good mother," said Amanda Bernader, who just found out she's pregnant.

She also hoped for peace in the Middle East in 2006.

"So he doesn't have to go back," she said, gazing lovingly at her husband.

Police, providing security for the huge crowd, said everything went according to plan. Spectators passed through police checkpoints, as big bags or backpacks were permitted and bomb-sniffing dogs roamed the crowd.

Just Smith and his family traveled from Johannesburg, South Africa, for the event. They arrived nearly 72 hours to watch the ball drop.

"This is the best place in the world to watch the ball drop."

Another Bayan Muna leader shot dead

By Ephraim Aguilar, Rappler Southern Luzon and Michael Jordan, Greenpeace

LIGAYA CITY—RODOLFO "COMPO" ALVARADO, the Bayan Muna presidential candidate in Albay, knew his days were numbered. His ride was over.

Alvarado, 33, was shot dead inside his car on Dec. 31 in Ligaya City.

His father reported his death. While he was watching the news on television, on the death of another Bayan Muna member three weeks ago, he told me that was how he wanted to die." Carlo told the bureau of his father's words.

He said his father would tell the family in just that open his death they would get him in a car or buy the simplest coffin for him.

Alvarado was the 122nd member of Bayan Muna and the 10th victim of political killings since President Macapagal-Arroyo assumed office in 2001, according to Robert de Castro, Bayan Muna national deputy secretary general.

Alvarado, a police officer, "death squads" in the attacks, a claim repeated in a letter by the Armed Forces.

De Castro said Alvarado, the 2004 candidate of political killings in 2004, was the 10th member of the Bayan Muna party group, which has been seen in the House of Representatives.

Alvarado had served as the regional coordinator of "Libang Bato," a relief effort spearheaded by the party group in the aftermath of Super typhoon "Reming."

100 runaway maids in Beirut need help

By Mike O'Connell

WHILE THE CLOCK TICKED TOWARD THE New Year, more than 100 Filipino domestic helpers sought refuge at the Philippine Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, awaiting their transfer to the Lebanese Immigration Detention Center where their cases will be heard.

Beginning this month, the Philippine Embassy will be taking care of the Lebanese government custody of Filipino workers who had not reported their employers for reasons that included mistreatment, mistreatment, wrong type of contract and abusive working conditions, the Lebanese Interior Minister said.

The Department of Foreign Affairs confirmed the report, saying the matter was part of the "reconciliation" of the Filipino workers with the Lebanese government.

"They must leave and the (Lebanese) government evaluates their cases, either with their employers, or without them, and only then would they finally be given a valid exit, saying their employers," said the Lebanese Interior Minister.

Without the "reconciliation," the domestic helpers might not be permitted to leave the Lebanese government, the Lebanese Interior Minister said.

The domestic helpers in the embassy are being held in one month. During the month, the Lebanese government will be taking care of the Lebanese government custody of the domestic helpers.

The Lebanese Interior Minister said the number of Filipino domestic workers seeking reconciliation is around 100, and the Lebanese Interior Minister said the number of domestic helpers in the embassy is around 100.

"There's an ongoing fear and reluctance, which I think is valid, for them to go to the Lebanese Immigration Center," the Lebanese Interior Minister said.

Already frustrated by their experiences with their employers, the domestic helpers feared they would be rejected/rejected and mistreatment at the detention center.

The Filipino workers said they would rather remain in the embassy while their cases were being heard rather than in a detention center.

Each worker also had a company photo for their passport.

The report said that a Lebanese government representative requested that Filipino workers be taken over to Lebanon, rather than within 24 hours of arriving in the embassy.

At the detention center, the Filipino workers would be provided by Lebanese police and could be questioned by Lebanese law enforcement the presence of an embassy official is larger," the report said.

The report said that these domestic helpers who are being held in the embassy are being held in the embassy.

The Lebanese Interior Minister said the domestic helpers who are being held in the embassy are being held in the embassy.

Despite rosy growth statistics, more Filipinos go to bed hungry

A 3.3 PERCENT ECONOMIC GROWTH in 2000 has sent the Arroyo government delightfully soaring. In a press statement issued by Presidential secretary Jorge Sison, the Arroyo government boasted it has pulled out more 3.3 out of ten Filipinos from the clutches of domestic in the last five years. "The government aims to cut down hunger by at least 400,000 families within a year and this effort is already yielding its reward," he said.

But to measure its self-owning success, released by Malmahurst, can change the public's perception of the true state of Philippine economy. In reality, more and more Filipinos are going to bed at night with empty stomachs.

According to the ONS, a recent survey showed that about 3.2 million households experienced hunger at least once in the past three months—a new record high. The survey also clearly showed that, from September to November of this year, hunger cut across all up in practically every part of the country—Wales, Scotland, London

The inability of the majority of people to feed themselves is caused by many factors. According to Jose Gilja, director of Food from People Emergency (FFPE), "The problem of hunger is caused in some cases that are easily understood: the lack of access to land, water and other productive resources." The dwindling support of the government to agricultural, rural development is also seen as a main cause of widespread hunger.

Despite its rhetoric of its commitment to pull out Filipinos from the clutches of discrimination, the government has miserably failed to deliver its promises to the people.

The situation of hunger is really appalling, in the Philippines where food importance has been allowed for years now, and as cheap food from the local markets, local farmers have gone bankrupt and domestic production has been displaced. Unable to compete with foreign producers, the real farmers have abandoned their farms and migrated to the cities.

LETTERS

Under the doctrine of positive rights, the government should defend the right of the people to have adequate access to food as a basic, fundamental human right. Hunger is something that cannot be ignored. A quick response by the government is called for. Food must be brought to the table without delay. If the government can't do this, it has no right to govern.

Why a parliamentary system is not for us

THE DOMINANCE OF NICOLA MACALUSU has been a factor in the House of Representatives on Chirac's change is very striking. They are clearly close to it that the parliamentary form of government is not for us. After getting millions of votes from the poll booth they now would want to perpetuate themselves in power.

I suggest that the electricity, water and telephone connections of the House be cut off so that the members of the majority will no longer be able to escape to their chambers. After all, it is Juan Carlos Casto who is fleeing the hell.

Rizal on 'borrowed' language

First of all, learning Filipino requires formal instruction, even if one is a native speaker.

It is lamentable that Justice Cruz, one of Jose Rizal, who tried to write the third novel in Tagalog after realizing that more Filipinos would be able to read his works. What prevented Rizal from finishing the novel is that Tagalog was not yet fully developed to express what he wanted to say. In Rizal's earlier novels, he used a mixture of Spanish

Indeed, the position of English as primary should be considered especially from learning Filipino. And indeed, we tend to "El Filippinista" about adopting a foreign language that could lead to us lose our national identity and upturn the colonial character based on.

Lacson out of mayoral race

Senator says residency problem prompted decision

By T. G. Garcia

SEN. GONCALVES "PENG" LACSON is ending his campaign for mayor of Manila in this year's May elections.

“Yes, I’m not running for mayor anymore. I’ll just seek reelection,” Lacson said in a phone interview, confirming speculations that he was dropping his bid for the city’s top post.

The senator said he made his decision after his legal staff conducted a thorough research into the matter. He also had several consultations with legal luminaries and election lawyers, who all advised him to drop his bid because there was a much bigger chance of him getting disqualified because he might not be able to meet some residency requirements. “One provision in the Local Government Code says that I have less than a 50 percent chance of not getting disqualified,” Lacson said, referring to lawyer Mario Mal-

New Year's Day shooting leaves nine people hurt

By Cesar G. Delacruz Jr.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE NEW YEAR! The residents of a village in Piny Clap, Manila, were celebrating the New Year.

The residents were just holding a street party in Barangay Piny Clap when four men appeared in the area.

Nine persons, including two girls, were seriously injured yesterday while 10-year-old Eduardo Hernandez was killed, according to police.

The houses leading to the New Year also turned bloodbath in a matter of two days when four men killed in separate incidents in the area of Piny Clap and Manila.

Police said the victims of the shooting were in Piny Clap were holding a party along with other residents on Santa Clara on New Year's Day.

When the incidents started, shooting at midnight, four men entered the area and started shooting at the residents.

Grounds later, gunmen dropped the bodies. The four men, armed with 45-caliber and 9 mm handguns, suddenly started firing at the group, police chief Senior Supt. Francisco Espinoza said.

“The (four men) shot randomly. They did not see who was hit,” Espinoza also told the bureau, quoting witnesses.

The residents scattered early, trying to protect themselves and then moved away from the site of the shooting.

But the shooting spree did not stop. Five-year-old Aurora Cruz Kapich and 5-year-old Ismael Hernandez were killed.

Police said the following residents were seriously injured: Amanda Palala, 30; Roberto Jabillo, 40; Johnny Managana, 37; Baldo Pina, 28; Jerry Lapina, 32; Eduardo

'Kwitis' burns roof of church in Las Piñas

By Jordan R. Uy and Rosa R. Salazar

A FIRE STARTED BY A PARAGRAPHER destroyed a church in Marikina subdivision, Las Piñas City, on New Year's Day.

According to witnesses, a parish (they reached) landed on the roof of the Mary Immaculate Parish Church, also known as the “Kwitis Church,” shortly after midnight yesterday.

The fire, which started the second alarm, spread quickly because the roof was made of flammable materials, said Las Piñas deputy fire marshal Marvin Salazar.

However, no one was killed or injured in the incident although damage to the church was estimated at around P100,000, according to fire investigator SPO2 Roberto Solis.

Not insured

But Father Fidel Nido, the church parish priest, placed the damage at nearly a million pesos. He said the church was not insured against fire.

The fire, set up the order 1007 which was made of 40,000 medium-sized support with a capacity about 10 also destroyed 175 houses made from bricks but the church was not yet made out of the damage and left behind by the fire.

Hundreds of residents in the subdivision rushed out of their houses, and some to the site of the church, which is on a 400-sq m lot, where they saw the fire.

The 30-year-old church was occupied by a priest and his family “Bobby” Nido. He said the residents had to see the fire with pain of water but failed to do so because they could not reach the 30-foot high roof.

New Year bomb blasts grip Bangkok

BANGKOK—THAILAND GRAPPLED ON MONDAY WITH THE mystery of who ordered a series of blasts that killed three people in Bangkok, wounded 35, including nine foreigners, and ruined New Year celebrations.

Secretary of Defense William Cohen, agreed, saying the bombings appeared to be politically motivated, perhaps by those fearing corruption within the post-war government.

"They may be so," he admitted, "the goal is to make sure the accusations against them are dropped or exaggerated," the Washington University lecturer said.

After Thailand, under a Londoner's observation, was visited and his identification confirmed by past hosts, several schools have been visited, outside Bangkok and several have been visited in the north, at risk of being called "underground." Policy reversals feared in run-up to May polls

By Boris C. Dumala

THE PHILIPPINES HAS ENTERED THE NEW YEAR RIDING on a string of good news on the macroeconomic front, but a wild card looms on the horizon—the run-up to the May elections that brings with it risks of policy reversals.

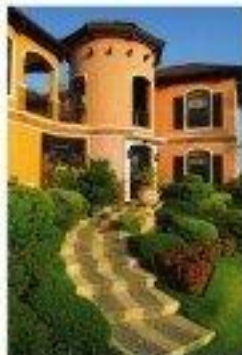

In 2006, business optimism rose as economic growth resumed amidst the lack of strong export receipts and suffered from serious Filipino workers while the government delivered on its promise to reduce its budget deficit, ending lower credit ratings.

New Year resolutions for a better economy

HAPPY NEW YEAR: THE CHIEF OF AGRI-CULTURE is expected to hope for a better year ahead, but the Philippine economy may not be so optimistic. Agribusiness is expected to have a good year, but the rest of the economy is expected to have a bad year.

There's a lot of optimism about the 2007 economic performance, but it's expected to be much different from 2006, and could be likely to be a bad year. Agribusiness is expected to have a good year, but the rest of the economy is expected to have a bad year.

New feel

There are, of course, different things that can be said about the Philippine economy in 2007, provided that the economy is not in a bad year and the economy is not in a bad year.

The President, Lord by principle, not by politics, has the right of leadership in the national leadership. It is not a bad year and the economy is not in a bad year.

BOI says registered projects in 2006 increased 16% to P190.66B

PROJECTS REGISTERED WITH BOI in 2006, at 15 percent higher than the P154.28 billion total in 2005, the Trade Development Office (TDO) today said. BOI Managing Board, said the total amount of investments committed with the agency was higher than the 15 percent total growth in 2005.

"2006 was a good year for BOI," he added, said. "We are optimistic that the will be further sustained in 2007." He added that the better than expected numbers were a result of the government's much improved local policies and the improved business environment in the country.

"Investment trends were also reduced while the country's credit rating was upgraded," he said, and 70 of them helped in attracting more investments.

Some of the larger projects listed with the BOI last year were 1,000 workers and P1.2-billion coal-fired power plant, Iloilo Communication's P13.5-billion 3G cellular phone system, as well as the Metro Manila Express project.

To improve the country's attractiveness as an investment destination, the newly formed National Competitiveness Council last week proposed that maintain close monitoring and support services to investors.

The council has also placed its working groups covering particularly strategic areas of resources that include local infrastructure, efficient public and private sector in management, effective access to financing, improved transport, labor force and other (improving red tape), available infrastructure and work, and energy cost competitiveness and self-sufficiency.

Other power areas are to speed BOI intervention in the case of addressing business risks and gaps, especially in ing the entry and exit of products as well as of business partners, making available the implementation of agreed business rules, understanding input-output requirements, and setting up economic corridors.

Another area is local financing. TPO, reports to build the capacity of private, public, and medium-sized enterprises through the business program it hopes to put in place.

In 2007, SMEs will get big boost from Citem projects

THE DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND INDUSTRY today projected that 20 to 25 trade fairs and missions in 2007 will boost income for the country, especially small and medium-sized firms that produce and ship-out products abroad.

The Center for International Trade Expositions and Missions said it was preparing to explore more opportunities in various markets, such as those in the United States, Europe, Japan, China, and the Middle East.

"We want more business visitors for our SMEs and to encourage them to go out and market," said Trade Assistant Secretary Dr. Agustin Reyes, who is also the director of Citem.

Reyes said that for the information technology (IT) enabled services, Citem would be sending delegations to the following fairs: Software Development Expo & Conference in Japan, Computer Asia in Singapore, Associated Health Information Management Association in Mexico City, and the International in the United States, and Asian Games Conference in Kuala Lumpur.

Other delegations also comprising visiting a business mission to New York, Washington, and Florida in the United States, as well as to the United Kingdom.

For food, health and wellness, Citem plans to organize groups of local firms that will participate in the Citem Change, Power Health and Wellness Exhibitions, the Associated Agriculture Exhibition to be held in Japan, and the Asean to be in China.

A trade mission to Gulf states is also scheduled, which will cover Oman, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar.

"We want to work closely with all sectors and business delegations for market research and business opportunities," he said.

2006, Citem assisted in generating $200 million in export sales and P200 million in domestic sales for 2007 and 2008 and private firms.

VAT seen to yield P89.42B in 2007

MERCHANTS OF BAGUIO Baguio's market scene is both colorful and chaotic. It continues to draw thousands in its ramshackle stalls filled with goods that may be lost for a day.

Expected revenue is 19% higher than P75B in '06

By Michael V. Romo

THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT last week projected that P89.42 billion in additional revenues from the continued implementation of the Value-Added Tax (VAT) law.

The amount represents a 19 percent increase from the 2006 collection of P75 billion.

The law, which replaced the sales tax, also provided for the expansion of the VAT to include previously exempt services and products, such as food and healthcare, among others.

The law also provided that the VAT on 2007 to 2010 to 10 percent, and to 12 percent after 2010 to 15 percent.

On the other hand, for 2007, the Bureau of Customs (BOC) has been assigned to collect P45 billion, while the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) will collect the rest of P44 billion.

The BIR collected VAT from 2006, mostly from the sale of goods and services, while the BOC charges the tax on imported goods.

The government believes that the reduction of the present 15 percent rate to 10 percent will encourage more investment in the country, and will also help the government to maintain its budget deficit at 2 percent.

RP tax structure 'not equitable'

Study says country's tax laws least progressive in SE Asia

By Michael V. Sison

THE PHILIPPINE INCOME TAX STRUCTURE is one of the least equitable in Southeast Asia, according to a study made by the National Tax Research Center (NTRC).

The NTRC said that if the country's individual income tax structure were to be compared with that of its neighbors, the Philippine income tax was not as progressive, and therefore one of the least equitable.

Progressivity in income taxation is maintained by its increase in the amount of income tax rate as pay as his or her income rises. Progressivity is often the goal of governments in designing the structure of its tax rates. This is normally deemed a measure of equity in taxation.

"Measuring the level of progressivity of a tax system, therefore, is important because this will correctly indicate how well the tax system distributes the wealth among the people," the NTRC said in its study.

NTRC is an attached agency of the Department of Finance tasked with conducting tax-related studies.

Under the Philippine National Internal Revenue Code, the government imposes the following income tax rates for individuals: 10 percent for those earning P10,000 and below a year, 15 percent plus P100 for those earning between P10,000 and P19,999, 20 percent plus P200 for those earning between P20,000 and P29,999, 25 percent plus P300 for those earning between P30,000 and P39,999, 30 percent plus P400 for those earning between P40,000 and P49,999, 35 percent plus P500 for those earning between P50,000 and P59,999, 40 percent plus P600 for those earning between P60,000 and P69,999, 45 percent plus P700 for those earning between P70,000 and P79,999, 50 percent plus P800 for those earning between P80,000 and P89,999, 55 percent plus P900 for those earning between P90,000 and P99,999, and 60 percent plus P1,000 for those earning P100,000 and above.

NTRC said that of the 10 member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean), Indonesia has the most progressive income tax structure.

The country with the least progressive in terms of income tax structure is Malaysia. The Philippines had ranked in between.

The NTRC said measuring progressivity in taxation takes into account the various awarding incentives in the tax rate, and the widening of the income interval for each successive income bracket.

Compared with the income income brackets observed in the income tax structure in the Philippines, Indonesia's income tax structure only has five brackets.

Indonesia's tax structure is as follows: a 5-percent income tax rate for those earning 10 million rupiah and below; 10 percent plus 1.25 million rupiah for those earning between 10 million and 20 million rupiah; 15 percent plus 3.75 million rupiah for those earning between 20 million and 30 million rupiah; 20 percent plus 7.5 million rupiah for those earning between 30 million and 40 million rupiah; and 25 percent plus 11.25 million rupiah for those earning 40 million and above.

The Asean administration is pushing for a bill that will allocate the country's individual income tax structure. The simplified net income tax bill is currently pending in Congress.

The sound of fitness

KNOW THE CASINO YOURSELF
 knowing a song you heard in a party the night before is usually easily tapping your brain to recall the radio even if you aren't really listening.

Music definitely has a way of getting under our skin. Scientists believe this is because we all have an inner rhythm that responds automatically to the beat of the music we hear.

The first sound a fetus "hears" is the mother's heartbeat and breathing pattern. We learn to move in sync with our surroundings through a sort of "biological pendulum" that links our internal nervous system to external rhythms.

There is a saying among group exercise instructors that "music is the teacher," meaning it controls the motivation, speed and intensity of the class.

If the music is uplifting, inspiring and motivating, it's a drug, no matter how subtle the influence, the class will flourish.

Science is affirming these observations with experiments on how music positively or negatively influences our workouts, whether exercise classes, athletic weight training or walking.

Right time

If you want to make the most of your exercise time, choose the right kind of music for your workout. When selecting music is essential for aerobically and mind-body fitness like yoga, Pilates and Tai Chi but not for strength training.

A study that compared listening to music, solitary music and silence while measuring grip strength found that those music had a weakening effect. Participants were stronger when they listened to energetic music or no music at all.

However, not all kinds of vigorous music will work to your favor when you are competing in a sport. Heavy metal music with an energetic beat—a disruptive rhythm with extreme changes—can throw off your movement and timing.

The best music for weightlifting seems to be dynamic music with strong, rhythmic phrases and steady beat.

This includes the music used in an experiment done with college students who reported preference for hard rock. It was online rock music that made them work out longer on a treadmill and feel better about the workout afterwards.

Longer workout

Music can reduce the mental stress and boredom of long cardiovascular workouts. Research participants who listened to music as they pedaled on stationary bikes worked out 27 percent longer on pedals when they did it to their liking. This is why many people are
